RABIES FROM A CAT'S BITE.

Lawyer Bartine, of Asbury Park, is dying from Hydrophobia.

Special to the Evening World.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 4.—Lawyer Richard S. Bartine, a leading member of the Monmouth County Bar, is slowly dying an awful death from the effects of a cat bite received nearly nine months ago at his home in Loch Arrior, a new Summer resort just north of here.

The bite was inflicted by Mr. Bartine's pet cat, and he thought nothing of the injury at the time. He neglected the wound and did not even have it cauterized. In fact, the thought that the cat might have been mad did not enter his head.

Dr. August Johnson, who is Mr. Bartine's friend and physician, has been loath to pronounce his patient hydrophobic, but this morning the patient's symptoms were such that the doctor is convinced that his friend is a victim of the dread disease, and he has no hopes for his recovery.

Mr. Bartine grew worse during the night. He is frequently seized with violent spasms, and it requires several strong men at his bedside to hold him.

Dr. David Bartine, of Merchantville, a brother of the sick man, has been sent for, and will take charge of him when he arrives. Mrs. Dr. Bartine, a sister, is also watching at Mr. Bartine's bedside.

Intense excitement has been created here by the news that Mr. Bartine is dying from hydrophobia.

Chief of Police Bailey issued an order this morning to kill all dogs found loose and muzzled, and all cats found roaming in the streets.

Lawyer Bartine is well known and highly respected in this neighborhood. He is the oldest living son of the late Rev. Dr. David Bartine, who was a Methodist clergyman in Philadelphia. His father has four daughters and a son, who live with him.

Agencies are pouring in from all quarters, from friends and strangers alike, as to whether or not it is a real case of hydrophobia, and offering sympathy and aid in no treatment.

A story was published this morning that the cat which bit Mr. Bartine had previously been eaten by a mad dog. Dr. Johnson denies this.

"A cat bite is always dangerous, whether the animal had rabies or not," said he to an Evening World reporter this morning.

"The family say that Mr. Bartine never mentioned a dog, although the cat may have been chased by a dog. The dog story probably originated from this. The cat died after it bit Mr. Bartine and his dog found his carcass in the woods and dragged it home. What became of the dead animal is not known."

"I would not say that Mr. Bartine is not ill with hydrophobia. He has the symptoms of the disease, although he does not froth at the mouth, has no fever and has not shown any signs of the terrible suffering which is usually attendant upon the disease. But that may come yet."

"Doctors will not express a positive opinion."

"My opinion is that Mr. Bartine has symptoms of hydrophobia, and I am treating him accordingly. I will tell you the story of the case as I heard it from the family."

Mr. Bartine has his office at Asbury Park. He has to cross the bridge over Deal Lake to reach his home at Loch Arrior.

ABE COAKLEY CAPTURED.

The Notorious Bank Robber Again a Prisoner at Police Headquarters.

Abe Coakley, the notorious bank robber, who was implicated in the robbery of the Manhattan Bank, in this city, the Deep River Bank, of Connecticut, and other big burglaries, is a prisoner at the Tombs.

Coakley was arrested yesterday by Central Office Detectives Mulholland and Armstrong for jumping his bail in December, 1889. His passion for the National game led to his capture.

He could not resist the temptation to go and see the game at their betting place, and it was at the Polo Grounds that the detectives spotted him and placed him under arrest.

On the night of Jan. 6, 1890, Coakley, who had fallen out of the ranks of successful bank burglars and had been keeping an unsuccessful road house at Cedar Island, and James Williams, a pickpocket, stole $545 from the pocket of Israel Hirschkowitz, a tailor, of 95 Cannon street, on a Grand street car.

Hirschkowitz gave the alarm, and Williams was captured, but Coakley escaped. Next morning, however, when Williams was at the police station, he was told that Coakley had been captured by the police.

But this did not please Williams. He complained that Coakley had been promised to get him out on bail, but had left him in the lurch without even a nickel. So he pleaded guilty to the indictment, and offered to become a witness for the people if Coakley was tried.

Coakley was tried in June, 1889, in the General Sessions, the jury standing eight for conviction and four for acquittal. Williams was a witness for the people and an enthusiastic one.

Coakley got out on bail again, and Williams was remanded to the Tombs to await Coakley's retrial. On Dec. 16, 1889, Coakley's retrial was moved, but he did not appear, and his bail was forfeited.

The detectives could not find him. Williams said that he was perfectly willing to remain in the Tombs forever if he could only get another chance to tell all he knew about Coakley. But when Coakley's trial was moved again last January, and Coakley did not appear, Williams decided that he had waited long enough and asked, in view of his long imprisonment and his services as a witness for the people, that he be discharged on his own recognizance.

So in the General Sessions, Jan. 20, last, District-Attorney Nicolai said that there seemed to be no doubt that Coakley had quit the State for the time being, and that he had no objection to Williams's discharge. Recorder Knapp therefore discharged Williams.

The search for Coakley was not abandoned, however, and recently Inspector Hyman got a tip that Coakley had been seen about his old haunts.

Coakley was not satisfied to remain out of the State for the State's good, and returned like a moth to the candle. His capture yesterday placed Inspector Hyman's mission, and it is possible that Williams may again be found to testify against Coakley.

Smith this morning said committed without bail.

PARDON FOR ROBERT SIGEL.

His Son's Freedom Will Be the Old General's Next Christmas Gift.

President Harrison has commuted the sentence of Robert Sigel, ex-paymaster in the Pension Office in this city, to imprisonment for two years and nine months, and has directed that at the expiration of that sentence a full pardon shall issue, which will restore him to full rights of citizenship.

This decision will let the young man out of prison Dec. 31 next, his sentence dating from March 31, 1889.

This action of the President is in consideration for Gen. Franz Sigel, the father of the ex-paymaster. Major Gen. Sigel, who won such fame as a fighting commander during the civil war, was Pension Agent at New York during the Cleveland Administration. His son, Robert Sigel, was his saying teller and confidential clerk. As such the young man made out the checks for pensioners and carried on the conduct of the pensioners' checks.

In February, 1889, the third year of Gen. Sigel's administration, the attention of the Washington Pension Bureau was called to certain suspicious transactions at the New York Agency, and Secret Agents Joseph E. Jacobs and Thomas J. Shannon were sent here to investigate.

They unearthed an astounding series of crooked transactions by young Sigel, by which maimed and disabled veterans and the widows and orphans of others had been systematically robbed by this son of the honored Union patriot.

Sigel's peculations were the more aggravating because of the utter helplessness of his victims. His first operation seemed to have been the robbery of a poor old soldier who had lost his sight in his country's cause.

Samuel Knight, of Port Henry, Essex County, blind and helpless, had been awarded pension, with arrears amounting to $5,730.47. The money was received at the New York Pension Agency, Aug. 25, 1888; for $2,430.47, one for $2,300 and two for $130 each.

The larger checks were sent to Knight and he cashed them, indorsing them with his mark, for he could not write.

But the other two were presented at a New York bank the day of their issue, indorsed with Knight's name and mark, and signed by Robert Sigel as witness.

The next case involved the stealing of $100 in a similar manner from Mrs. Jennie Heitman, the widow of a soldier, who had been awarded a pension with arrears of $675.

There were other similar cases, but these were sufficient for prosecution, and young Sigel was arrested and held in $5,000 bail on three indictments charging larceny.

He was about thirty-three years old then, and had a wife and two little boys
